Disabled Divers International

Scuba Cat Diving Phuket, Thailand

Phuket; formerly known as Tha-Laang or Talang is one of the southern provinces (changwat) of Thailand. Neighboring provinces are (from north clockwise) Phang Nga and Krabi, but as Phuket is an island there are no land boundaries. The island is served by Phuket International Airport, located in the north of the island. The ph of "Phuket" is an aspirated hard "p", not a soft "f", so the name is pronounced (roughly) "Poo-get". The name Phuket is apparently derived from the word Bukit in Malay that means mountain or hill, as this is what the island appears like from a distance.

Before that its old name was Ta-lang (in Thai): The word is derived from the old Malay "Telong" which means "Cape", which is still in used for one of the main districts in the Phuket area.

Geography

Phuket is the biggest island in Thailand, located in the Andaman Sea, in southern Thailand. The island is mostly mountainous with a mountain range in the west of the island from the north to the south. The mountains of Phuket form the southern end of the Phuket mountain range, which ranges for 440 km from the Kra Isthmus. 70 % of the island is covered with forest. Phuket has several sandy beaches.

One of the most popular tourist areas on Phuket is Patong Beach on the central western coast, perhaps owing to the easy access to its wide and long beach. Most of Phuket's nightlife and its cheap shopping are located in Patong, and the area has become increasingly developed. Patong means, "the forest filled with banana leaves" in Thai

Other popular beaches are located south of Patong. In a counterclockwise direction these include Karon Beach, Kata Beach, Kata Noi Beach and around the southern tip of the island, Nai Han Beach. These areas are generally much less developed than Patong, and sought out by individuals, families and other groups with a preference for more relaxed and less crowded environment than Patong.

Nitrox 36

EANx

Enriched Air With IAHD

That what is of real importance about NITROX, is being educated, in order to scuba dive safely at all times. The NITROX 36 program is intended to give this extra safety, as disabled people have a higher risk on a decompression illness due to their handicap. This risk is being reduced when scuba diving with NITROX and for this reason any diver should be able to use this during their first open water dive.

The course takes some four hours, after which a student needs a minimum of three dives to being able to apply for certification. The three dives can be combined with other training dives.

DDI Pro-Training

The DDI Pro-Training is a totally integrated program, which consists of three days of classroom, pool and open water training.

- You will learn how to relate to some of the psychological aspects of someone who is physically disabled.
- You will learn about a variety of physical disabilities and how they relate to scuba diving. Through simulations and workshops in the pool and open water you learn how to overcome some of the problems you may encounter when training physically disabled divers.

- You will learn how to become more aware of your students, their need, their attitudes, etc. Thinking steps ahead is very important here! (You can get in the water, how did you plan to get out?)
- You will learn how to develop a foresight in logistic awareness and considerations.

Surface Assistant

The 3S program is especially designed for people that want to be involved with disabled scuba diving, except diving itself. The Surface Assistant can assist the diver with the preparations prior to the dive, to prepare a dive plan, helping to building up the dive set, etc... All tasks and actions along the 'water line' except scuba diving itself. Thus, also assisting after the dive.

This course is ideal for family and friends that want to help and be part of the dive team, but do not want to get 'wet'. It also gives the disabled diver the feeling to being less dependent, in particular someone who is very relying on help. Besides that, it is fun to share experiences (to a certain extend) and to be a part of the team.

The course takes about six hours. It's highly recommended that the Surface Assistant follow an Oxygen Provider and First Aid and CPR course.
